His Excellency Premier Al-Asali continuel: "Syria, Egypt, and all the literated Arab countries are desirous of befriending those who show them rriendliness and will oppose anyone who shows them hostility."

His Excellency said: "During its stay in Moscow the Syrian delegation will discuss with the Soviet Government certain details connected with the financial payments due from Syria in return for arms purchased from the Soviet Union."

Pleshwhile, a report published by TASS says that the Syrian delegation began its (lacussions with the Soviet Government today. The Syrian mission arrived in Moscow from Prague yesterday by air. It was welcomed at the airport by Kuzmin, Deputy Premier of the Soviet Union; Marshal Zhukov, Soviet Defense Minister; the Syrian Ambascador in Moscow, the embassy's staff, and a number of Stylet officials.

ASALI DENIES SEEKING ALU IN MUSCUI

Beirut, ANA, in Arabic Code to the Hear East, July 29, 1957, 0900 ulf--M

Lamascus--Syrian Premier Sabri al-Asali said today that Syria will not accept aid from anyone and will not accept domination by anyone. Al-Asali was replying to a press question about his opinion on the New York HERALD TRIBURE report that the departure of the Syrian economic delegation under Acting Defense Minister Khalid al-Azm to Moscov aims at asking for sconomic aid from the Soviet Union in a sum varying between 100 and 150 million dollars because of an economic collapse which now faces Syria.

He said that Syria's economic situation is sound and there is no need for aid from any side. What was published about the alleged economic should be was fabricated and is a lie. He went on to say that Saria did not accept aid in the past and will not accept it at present or in the future, because he will not be an appendage to anybody and will not accept the domination of anyone in the various political, economic, and military fields.

At a time when world public opinion is very much sympathizing with and supporting the struggle of a small and freedom-loving people in Oman and Muscat, Western political circles, on the other hand, are noting with great concern the unexpected meeting which was held in Moscow between certain high political personalities and Soviet personalities. These Westerners have not been able to conceal their increasing anxiety at the development of relations between Egypt and Syria on the one hand and the Soviet Union on the other. They also feel that their attempts to disrupt relations between the two parties will not be successful and that the policy of complete frankness pursued by Moscow in her relations with Damascus and Cairo has triumphed over the policy of deceit and prevariention pursued by the West in its relations with the Arab East.

to its superficial understanding of the reality of the new Arab awakening and the political maturity enjoyed by the leaders of thought in Syria

The vacuum theory, which clearly manifested itself some time ago, and which followed many Western military and political plans in the Middle East, shows not only the rigidity of Western political thought, but also the imperialist bases will not change nor will the imperialists be able to realize that Arab nationalism has actually filled all vacuums that could exist in this area. Arab nationalism is an adequate guarantee against any foreign attempt, from whatever source, to infiltrate into the Arab East, Syria and Egypt represent this sound national policy, and since they follow. thic policy, they cannot relinquish any part of their absolute sovereignty, frection, and vicepoints in their merch toward achieving the interests of their countries. That is why positive neutrality is a sound basis for their policy. The Soviet Union resized the true simution in the Arab East and so respected the neutrality of the two countries, and supported and founded its relations with Egypt and Syria on the basis of complete respect for the full sovereignty of the two countries and their liberation policy.

As a result of this realization by the Soviet Union, Arab-Soviet relations continued to improve, and shortly afterwards the shadow of doubt which importalism instilled in the hearts of the statemen of this country with regard to the intentions of the Soviet Union faded out. Moscow confirmed on many occasions that it follows a firm and unalterable policy and that it pursues this policy with complete frankness without any attempt to doub_ecross the Arabs.

The understanding which has taken place between Moscow on the one hand and Egypt and Syris on the other, as partly manifested in the recent Moscow meeting, can only be a natural rasult of the reciprocal respect which both sides show one snother, and the confidence of both sides in the frank policy faithfully pursued by the other side.

As we have already said, the West Tooks on the recent Moscow meeting with great doubt and anxiety. Had the West tried to understand Syrian-Egyptian policy in a manner devoid of selfishness and imperialist mentality, it would have realized that any rapprochement between the Soviet Union and Egypt and Syria could only have taken place on the basis of the Soviet Union's respect for the policy believed in and pursued by Syria and Egypt-a policy which does not permit the Soviet Union to enter the Middle East although it permits the extermination of imperialist plots infiltrating into the area and dominating it.

MOSCOW GUARANTEES SYRIAN SECURITY

Beirut, ANA, in Arabic Code to the Near East, Aug. 5, 1957, 0900 GMT--M (Excerpts)

A dispatch from Moscow published today in the Damascus paper AR-RAI AL-AAM states that Syrian ambassador in Moscow Jamel 21-Farre has been quoted as saying that it can be asserted that Syria's military requirements are now secured as a result of the talks carried out by the Syrian official delegation in Moscow. The newspaper's correspondent in Moscow says that Nikita Akrushchev, leader of the Soviet Communist Party, asserted to the delegation headed by Khalid al-Azm, ecting Syrian Minister of Defense, that the Soviet Union adheres to the policy of supporting the Arabs, and that it will never deviate from this policy.

The correspondent adds that Knrushchev told the delegation that Syria's safety is guaranteed, that the Societ Union will not permit any aggression against it. Khrushchev said he appreciates Syria's policy and attitude and added that Russic seeks nothing from Syria or any Arab country. Russia, he said is interested only in helping these countries oppose the establishment of foreign military bases on their soil. The correspondent says that the mating at which this discussion took place was attended by Khrushchev, Soviet Premier Bulganin, and Soviet Minister of Defense Marshal Zhukov.

Ambassador al-Farra asserted to the correspondent of the Syrian paper AR-RAI AI-AAM that the new agreement with the Soviet Union "will help Syria's economic growth and development and will also help Syria carry out its productive projects."

Khalid al-Azm and Dr. Fakhir al-Keyyali returned to Moscow yesterday from a tour of Soviet towns. Al-Azm told the AR-RAI AL-AAM correspondent that the countries which do not cooperate politically with the West will not be choked economically. There were many ways to insure their trade and economic progress, he said. Dr. al-Kayyali said: "The Soviet leaders asserted to us that they do not want bases, oil, or any concessions in our countries in return for their aid to us."

(Editor's Note: Beirut, ANA, in Arabic Code to the Near East, Aug. 3, 1957, 1010 GMT reported that Foreign Minister al-Bitar told ANA that the no government statement concerning the agreement with the USSR will be made until the Syrian delegation returns from Mossow and the cabinet reviews its report.)

Syrian-Soviet Relations:

The ARAB NEWS AGENCY and Cairo radio report on an interview given the Moscow correspondent of the Damascus paper AR-RAI AL-AAM by USSR Communist Party Secretary Khrushchev in which he 'affirms that the Soviet Union will assist Syria and other Arab countries against any aggression.' The ANA report adds that representatives of chamoers of agriculture in various Syrian provinces will also go to Moscow "at their own expense" to discuss Syrian-Soviet cooperation in agricultural matters and that the Syrian cabinet has asked Hamid al-Khuja to visit certain East European countries in an effort to get them to increase their imports of Syrian products.

A Damascus commentary on the decision of the USSR to grant economic aid to Syria contrasts the no-strings-attached aid of the Soviet Union with the "meager aid" offered by the West, which "always carries with it conditions that endanger the recipient country's sovereignty and independence. The point that the Soviet aid will not affect Syrian independence is stressed by the Syrian Propaganda Minister in a statement reported by ANA. The agency also reports Syrian Foreign Minister al-Bitar as saying his government has received "general information" about the agreement with the USSR but will get the details from the delegation when it returns next week.

Israeli commentator Moshe Pearlman sees a tieup between the recent Syrian attacks along the Israeli border and the new Syrian-Soviet arms deal. The attacks, he says, were used to create an atmosphere of crisis in order to strengthen the position of Colonel Sarraj and justify the acceptance of Soviet arms. He adds that the USSR, having suffered setbacks in Jordan and Saudi Arabia, was anxious to supply arms as a means of regaining prestige in the area.

"ASS reports the departure from Moscow of the Syrian Government delegation of the its talks with Soviet leaders. The text of the communique on the visit, previously summarized by TASS, in broadcast both in Arabic and on the home service.

The Czechoslovak home service and CTK devote great attention to the arrival of the Syrian Minister of Defense, using the occasion to point out by Czechoslovakia's growing friendly relations with Syria.

US I AID HELPS SYRIA WHERE WEST FAILED

Damascus, in Arabic to Syria and the Near East, Aug. 7, 1957, 1115 GMT--N (Excerpts)

Syria's liberal policy in the international field is based on clear and frank bases. Foremost among these is the Trinciple of cooperation with all states on the basis of equality, and the principle of positive neutrality. Recent events have proved that such an independent and liberal policy was severely opposed by the Western imperialist powers which want their relations with small states to be like that of overloads and subject people.

These imperialist powers have an avowed Middle East policy simed at making the countries of the area remain permanently backward in industry and weak in military matters, a state of affairs which would make it easy for them to play havoc with the potentialities of the area, impose their influence and domination on it, and assume control of its resources for the benefit of millipagires in the Western capitals.

God has willed that most of the Middle East countries should obtain political independence, and now there remains before them a continued hard struggle for achieving economic independence without which there could be no political independence. Syria was one of the states of this area which freed its economy from subordination to foreign powers.

On this basis, Syria has laid down its economic development programs, paying close attention to raising the standard of living of the people and increasing the prosperity of the country. But the implementation of the huge projects entailed in these programs requires, in addition to natural potentiality, technical skill and heavy equipment which has to be obtained through the assistance of countries which have already gone ahead of us in these fields. In the course of achieving economic development, Syria has declared more than once that she is prepared to accept aid from any country, provided the aid is unconditional and does not affect our independence and sovereignty in any declaration.

The world's economic institutions which could make available loans and technical aid in this regard are, however, greatly influenced by American policy which is strongly linked with the policy of the Western imperialist powers. When approached for aid for the implementation of a certain project largely or whofly beneficial to the people, the Western powers themselves withdraw their hand and offer meager aid. Furthermore, their aid, even overlooking its value, always carries with it conditions unacceptable to a country which wants to preserve its prestige and protect its sovereignty and independence.

What is even worse is that the Western powers do not really wish to help, nor do they want us to obtain aid from others. In short, they stand as obstacles to the realisation of our economic development.

Soviet Aid

The joint communique issued in Moscow yesterday, following the talks of the Syrian Government delegation with the Soviet Government, came as an important step in wiping out all traces of the blockade which the Western imperialist powers are attempting to impose on Syria. Syria, which has always vowed to abide by the principle of positive neutrality and gooperation with all states on the basis of complete equality, has found the communique a source on which it can rely in obtaining needed technical and economic aid without affecting its independence and sovereignty.

In offering this (aid-Ed.) the Soviet side has no intention of dominating Syria. On the contrary, its attitude is derived from its appreciation of the problems placed by imperialism in the way of Syria's economic development. The Soviet side, therefore, wishes to help Syria to wipe out these problems.

It is to be understood that the results reached by the Syrian side in Moscow are in full harmony with the policy of neutrality and the Bandung Conference resolutions which constitute the main bases of Syria's foreign policy.

Secret Naval Support

Paris, AFP, Radioteletype in French to the Americas, Aug. 7, 1957, 1517 OMT-E

Beirut-Quoting an "informed diplomatic source," the pro-Egyptian Lebanese paper AS-SIYASAH has published some sensational details on the Syrian-Soviet talks which have just ended in Moscow with the conclusion of a treaty of assistance in all fields. According to the paper, one of the clauses of the agreement provides for the arrival at the Syrian port of Latakia in the near future of several naval units, including two submorines, the USSR has given Syria.

According to AS-SIYASAH, the USSR has promised to support Syria against any aggression "wherever it might come from." The USSR would supply Syria with "defensive anymments" amounting to 350 million Syrian pounds to be repaid in 20 annuities, the Lebenese caper aids. In addition to the nival units, including the two submarines, Syria would receive modern artillery material including radar-controlled antiaircraft guns.

AS-SIYASAH gives some details about the provisions made for the training of Syrian naval and artillery specialists in the handling of the new equipment. It has been agreed, the paper says, that 120 Syrian army and neval officers will be trained at the Polish base of Gdynia; 60 artillery men will at the same time take special courses in Czechoslovakia. As part of the agreements, the Syrian air force will receive new shipments of MIG-17's and jet bombers of the Ilyushin type. A Syrian air force mission will go to the USSR to familiarize the pilots and unit commanders with the handling of these aircraft.

AS-SITASAH also gives details of the economic aspects of the agreements signed in Moscow. Over a period of 4 years, Syria would receive 650 million Syrian pounds "to make possible the industrial and agricultural development of the country as well as the big works program." Two-thirds of this sum would be repaid in 10 annuities in the form of Syrian merchandise. The series of agreements ends, the paper says, with a cultural convention which, among other things, provides for the exchange of education missions, professors, and of publications.

Commenting on the Syrian-Soviet joint communique, which was issued last night, Salih Aqil, the Syrian Minister of State for Propaganda and Broadcasting, said: "The communique was frank as it showed that the economic and technical aid which the Soviet Union granted to Syria was unconditional and that it would not lead to any Soviet interference, internally or external.."

Aqil added: "From this, we see that the Syrian delegation asserted two points: First, adherence to positive neutrality and nonalignment with any camp or pact no matter how important it was; second, the securing of economic aid which will undoubtedly be a strong pillar that will bolster our political path and will block all imperialist tactics which seek to disperse our ranks both internally and externally."

Agil went on to say: "In addition to the benefits which it will confered on the military force, the economic aid will undoubtedly support the industrialization move in the country and will insure funds for many projects and schemes such as irrigation, railway, and other projects. It is only natural that these projects will insure our economic stability." Syrian Foreign Minister Sa ah ad-Din al-Bitar, replying to a question about whether the government received detailed information from the Syrian delegation on the results of its discussions and agreements with the Soviet Government, said: "The government received some general information. The government will become acquainted with full details from the delegation after its return."

Al-Bitar added that the delegation which arrived in Frague today will spend a few days in Czechoslovakia to complete the discussions begun with the Czechoslovak officials before its departure for Mcsccw. The delegation is expected to return to Damascus around the middle of next week.

MIDDLE EAST REVIEW :

(Broadcasts from COOl GMT to 2400 GMT Aug. 8)

Aug. 9, 1957

Syrian-Soviet Relations:

There are a considerable number of reports from Middle East transmitters on reaction to the outcome of the Syrian-USSR negotiations. According to the ARAB NEWS AGENCY, while many Syrian statesmen have expressed their views in support of the agreement, both the opposition People's Party and the Socialist Resurrection Party-the latter is participating in the Syrian Government-have decided to reserve judgment until they get the full details of the agreement. Syrian Education Minister as-Sibai told ANA that Syria needed the Soviet aid because of the "partial economic blockade" imposed on Syria by the West. He also said Syria "abandoned the idea of launching a domestic loan in view of the harmful propaganda which aroused the citizens' doubts about the economic situation."

A Damascus radio commentary says that Syria was subjected to "an unprecedented economic and political campaign" which lost her a "large portion of her markets" and possibilities for developing her industry and agriculture. That is why the Soviet Union, appreciating Syria's fight to preserve her independence, "felt that Syria ought to be compensated for her sacrifices" and thus was quick to offer aid on the basis of equality, the commentary adds. It also notes that the climate for such aid was prepared by the visits of Shepilov to Syria and Quwwatli to Moscow.

The Beirut paper AS-SIYASAH is quoted by ANA as saying that the Soviet-Syrian agreement indicates the bankruptcy of Secretary Dulles' policies. The same agency reports the Beirut paper AN-NAHAR as saying that the results of the Syrian visit to Moscow are still to be seen. The paper predicts increased Western pressure against Syria and that Syria will become somewhat of a stranger to her neighbors. ANA reports that the Syrian Chamber of Deputies will be summoned to an extraordinary session to ratify the Syrian-Soviet agreement.

Cairo's Hebrew program reports on an interview with "members of the USSR Supreme Soviet" published in the Egyptian paper AL-MASA. The Soviet members are reported as saying that the USSR will supply "all the economic aid requested by the Arabs" and that Egypt "always has the right to demand the evacuation of UNEF from its territory." An Israeli Arabic program carries "a sincere word to the Syrian President from a common enemy," pointing out that the dangers threatening Syria are due to the activities of the "foolhardy young coloner" heading the Deuxieme Bureau urging the President to guide Syria in a new direction.

Demascus, in Arabin to Syria and the Near East, Aug. 8, 1957, 1615 GMT-M

(Text) : only free as a see that the second of the all the

Syria has registered a new step toward establishing the pillars of its full independence and the basis of its new policy, and toward insuring the future of its economy. The agreements concluded in Moscow were a natural outcome of the concurrence of Syrian and Soviet views with regard to the need for Syria to preserve its rull sovereignty and to continue to pursue the policy of positive neutrality.

During past months Syria was subjected to an unprecedented economic and political campaign. But she was able to unorge from this campaign triumphant and proud. However, she lost a large portion of her economic market and huge potentialities which could have helped tremendously in the development of her industry and agriculture. It has become quite obvious to the Soviet Union that Syria is anxious to preserve her independence and refuses to be subservient to any foreign influence. It has also become clear that Syria is fully and truly determined to defend and strengthen her foreign policy, which repudiates military pacts, and alignment to either, of the world block, The Soviet Union felt that Syria ought to be compensated for her secrifices for the sake of preserving her sovereignty, and thus showed readiness to offer technical and financial aid on the basis of equality of sovereignty, respect for Syria's policy, and nonintervention in Syria's affairs.

. The climate for such aid was prepared when Soviet Foreign Minister Shepilov visited Syria, and when Syrian President Shukri al-Quewatli visited the Soviet Union at the head of a large Syrian delegation. These discussions then developed into frank and clear agreements whose principles and bases were enumerated in the joint communique which was released last Tuesday.

There is no doubt that the activity in the economic field which will follow the release of this communique will be the basic element in developing Syrian economy, and will supply it with the assential impetus which will boost the standard of living here to new levels. Should this Soviet aid, which is definitely based on specific loans, and the offering of essential technical aid make Syria feel secure with regard to the future of its sons and daughters, then it will also make Syria prove to the neighboring Arab governments that the policy of nonalignment is a successful policy, and the temperature to said order ents are a few times

- Northeless Ball Agreement

Beirut, AMA, in Arabic Code to the Meer Best, Aug. 8, 1957, 0930 CMR-M

(Excerpts) Damascus-PThe Systen-Soviet agreement has been received with interest by political and popular direles and the press here. Many statesmen have expressed their views in support of the agreement.

Hani as-Sibai, Minister of Education, last night expressed his satisfaction with the agreement since "our country" is in a state of a semieconomic blockede conducted by the Western states with a view to opposing the present regime and opposing us for every action the government carries out abroad. As Sibai said that the agreement secures the disposing of Syrian sheat and cotton products and likevise secures the implementation of the extraordinary budget -for development projects -- based upon revenues which Syris, could not secure nor obtain because of the harmful propagands and the Western states opposition to us.

For example, he said, among the revenues which the extraordinary budget depended upon were foreign loans. "We sought several times to obtain a loan from the international bank but in vain. We could not conclude any loan with this bank because of its political conditions affecting our independence and impelling us to follow the West's bandwagon. Therefore, we have rejected these conditions. We have also abendoned launching a domestic loan in wiew of the harmful propagands which aroused the citizens! doubts over the economic situation."

As-Sibal affirmed that the Syrian-Soviet agreement was "unconditional." The agreement, he added, will secure for us the necessary appropriations, mechines, equipment, and studies besides dealing with part of our debts -he means the installments of the arms deals concluded by Syria.

Churhadin deputy of the National (Al-Wateni) Party, said that the agreement came in accordance with the country's requirements and in "line with its sovereignty and independence, and that Syria welcomes cooperation with the Soviet Union on unconditional bases."

William Conference Actions . The Syrian press continues to coment on the agreement. The Damescus deily AL-AYYAM said that the agreement was a netural consequence of the West's policy and that the principle of unconditional aid has been approved by the Arab states and edvocated by the four Arab leeders at their historical meetings.

The paper went on to say that this agreement was in fact in the interest of both Syris and the Soviet Union, as Syris has secured aid from a great friend like the Soviet Union while the Soviet Union itself foiled the attempts to elimists it from Syris and there free peoples in the Middle East. The paper said there is no boubt that the Western states were disturbed by the agreement. They are the ones to be held responsible for this because it came as a result of their foolish imperialist policy which they have said the still pursuing by supporting and arming Terrel while witholding arms from the breast and persisting in suppressing the independence movements in Algeria. TARAZI CLARIFIES SYRIA-USSR STATEMENT

Beirut, ANA, in Arabic Code to the Near East, Aug. 10, 1957, 0915 CMT--M (Text)

Demascus--Clarifying the Syrian-Soviet joint statement which was issued lest Tuesday, Dr. Salah at-Tarazi, secretary general of the Syrian Foreign Ministry, said that the statement does not directly approve specific agreements but opens the door to such agreements which, no doubt, will be subject to studies and discussions between experts of the two sides and the assemblies which represent the people in ratifying various legal steps in this respect."

Dr. at-Tarazi said that the objectives of the joint statement "do not deviate from the Bandung Conference's resolutions nor from the positive neutrality upon which Syria's present policy is based." He added: "The imperialist enemies of Syria do not want Syria to break their economic blockade. They also oppose any measure to strengthen Syria, because they want it to remain weak and incapable of repelling aggression."

In a statement broadcast last night from the government controlled Syrian broadcasting station, Ghalib al-Kayyali, director of the broadcasting station, said that Syria has moved from its passive attitude to that of initiative in the international political field now that it has crushed a series of international plots concocted against it." he said that the enemies of Syria will eventually find themselves on the defensive, a thing they will not like very much.

Comparing Syria's attitude with that of other Arab states, Al-Kayyali said: As for the Arab states now siding with the Baghdad Pact and the Eisenhower doctrine, they have lost every pretext to justify this attitude, and the governments of these states are in constant fear.

Al-Kayyali added: The Soviet Union helps us because its interest coincide with ours. Arab unity is advantageous to it for it halts imperialist influence in the Middle East. The objectives of Western policy and world Zionism are, however, economic interests, aggressive strategic interests, and the protection of Israel. Al-Kayyali further said that "the Soviet Union does not offer such aid as charity or for the sake of blue eyes. Nevertheless, it helps us, supports our policy, creates various means to safeguard our security, because it believes that this is in its own interest."

Geneva--Chalid al-Azm, Syrian Defense Minister arrived here today in a special Czechoslovak plane from Frague on his way back to Damascus after a visit to the Soviet Union. The Defense Minister evaded questions from correspondents about whether he had arranged to buy arms from the Soviet Union or Czechoślovakia.

"In the past, whatever we have said about buying or not buying arms has been taken as an excuse to deliver arms to Israel. This time we are adopting another policy of not saying anything about whether or not we have purchased arms," he said.

The Syrian party was flying on to Damascus later today in a regular airliner.

Daviet lenetration:

There has been a decline in Middle East comment on the telks between dyrion and Boviet and Czech leaders. Damascus radio carries the statement issued at the conclusion of the Syrian delegation's Prague visit which says Czechoslovakia will send economic and technical experts to Syria. There is no mention of Syria's sending anything to the Czechs.

Discussing the Soviet decision to aid Syria, an Amman radio commentary rays the Soviet aim "is to turn Syria into a Russian political and attitude the Soviet aim "is to turn Syria into a Russian political and attitude the Soviet aim "is to turn Syria into a Russian terms in advance." Another opinion on why the USCR is aiding Syria domes from Syrian radio chief Al-Kayyali, who says, according to an AGE MEWS AGENCY report, that "the USCR does not offer such aid as charly or for the sake of our blue eyes." It offers aid "because it believes that it is in its own interest.".

The Syrian-Coviet statement does not approve "sjecific agreements," AN reports the secretary general of the Syrian Foreign Ministry as saying, "but them the door to such agreements." Cairc radio quotes the rejort of the Syrian paper AR-PAI AL-AAA that Syria has already sighed an agreement of the documents. In a classification over Damaseus radio upon his return from Prague and Mescow, the terian army chief of staff tells listeners "the Soviets wand only core licenship" and thus wish to support legitimate Arao quoted is not "obtain any chief aid to help Syria overcome hardships resolver licenship and imperialist plots."

Other comment on the Middle East is largely concerned with the recognition of the Tunisian Republic. TASS carries the congratulatory message from Veroshilov to Bourguiba, and an Arabic commentator, contrasting Soviet and Western policies toward the Arab world, says "it is no accident" that the Soviet Union was the first country to recognize Tunisia. Another Arabic commentary, referring to reports that France has decided to resume its aid to Tunisia, says this is only part of the policy of trying to regain control of the country. The commentator adds that the United States is ready to help France both "politically and militarily."

The Frague home service and CTK continue to publicize the visit of the Syrien Defense Hinister and his party. A communique on the talks, released by CTL, says views were exchanged on questions of interest to the two countries and that Czechoslovakia will send economic experts to Syria and train Syrian workers for industrial plants Czechoslovakia is building in Syria. In a forewell speech over the Prague home service, Syrian Defense Hinister al-Azm thanked the Czechs for the assistance given the Arabs in achieving a "victory of justice over foreign imperialists."

All East European transmitters to give wide attention to the Oman situation, describing it as a battle of Arab nationalism against the imperialists and as an Anglo American fight for power in the Middle East.

AD-DIN FRAISES RECEPTION IN MOSCOW

Domascus, in Arabic to Syria and the Near East, Aug. 11, 1957, 1615 GMT--M

(Text)

The critical period of tension prevailing in the world for a long time has affected the Middle Fast from the date of creation of Israel when imperialist pressure and plots increased against the Arabs. This culminated in the great danger to which Egypt and Arabiss were exposed during the Suez events, as a result of which the true nature of imperialism was exposed. At the same time appeared the decisive will of the freedom-loving states to stop the aggression and condemn war and force as a means of settling differences between motions. A read to the contract of the con

Foremost among these friendly freedom-loving states the Soviet Union when it took a decisive step by stopping further aggression and warning the aggressors beforehand that they would bear the consequences of their crimes against peace, in addition to other stands which the Soviet Union maintained in the United Nations toward Arab questions. After all this, the natural outcome was that we had direct contact with the responsible authorities in the Soviet Union and conveyed to them the gratitude of the Arab people in general and the Syrian people in particular.

Furthermore, this unbiased attitude on the part of the Soviet authorities encouraged us to speak to them frankly about the hardships experienced by our country, hardships caused by imperialism and Zionism in order to prevent its development and improvement of its economic situation, as well as to prevent it from attaining economic and political freedom and to weaken its defense potentialities. Was an one of the first state of the same of the same

The first thing we made clear to the Soviet authorities was that Syria, people and government, attaches deep faith to positive neutrality and considers this policy as a basis of its relations with all states in the world. That is why Syria has rejected with obstinacy and determination all the conditional aid offered to her; as it also refused to join any pact or defense organization in whatever form it may be, such as the Raghdad Pact, the Eisenhower Doctrine, and others.

SYRIA Aug. 12, 1957

This is in pursuance of the policy which Syria has reached following the long struggle of its people and after fully liberating itself from foreign interference. Thus, when we welcome any aid for our people we are doing so on the basis of our belief of nonalignment and non-restriction of our political and economic freedom, and also on the basis of not endanged ing our sovereignty and nationalism.

Upon arriving in the Soviet Union we saw indeed the genuine desire of the Soviets to support our legitimate area positions and to extend unconditional aid to meet all economic hardships which Syris is facing as a result of its stand against imperialist plots. The Soviets want only our triendship and the friendship of all the freedom-loving and self-liberating peoples of the world.

What we appreciated throughout our tour was that all the Soviet people support our position and velcome our friendship. We felt the indescribable love, friendship, and full respect which the Soviet people harbor for us in our struggle for our freedom. We also felt in all our official and nonofficial contacts that the Soviet Union has no expansionist aims, and that the desire of the Soviet people is to exploit the resources of their country and to raise their standard of living. We did not find envone wishing to interfere in the internal affairs of our country; we found only support for our Arab position and our struggle against imperialism and Zionism.

The Soviet people, who suffered the bitter catastrophies of World Wer II, are savious to avoid a wer which will affect their prosperity. There is no level best to avoid a wer which will affect their prosperity. There is no could that the true desire for peace and noninterference in the affairs of others are the things which encourage friendship with the Soviet Union.

We in Syris and in the self-liberated Arab countries should not let threats and such teatics as political and economic pressure force us to deviate from our national objectives. And we should give our friendship only to those who befriend us. We should not be affected by the biased propaganda launched by imperialism and its supporters about the intentions of the Soviet Union in an attempt to keep us under its domination, isolate us from the world, and threaten our people with hungar and death.

We have already tasted the spectness of sovereignty and freedom. We should not permit imperialism and Zionism to dominate us again through their plans and pects, no matter how concealed these are and no matter what means imperialism uses in advancing them.

the vila section we should like to refer to the welcome, hospitality, and true love we received during our visit to Czechoslovakia. We were also pleased to find in the Soviet Union sincere friends who understand our true problems, support our struggle, and offer us unconditional align that we will be able to overcome all our political and economic hardships.

The most important thing we came across was the good reputation of the struggle of the Syrian people against imperialism. This reputation has reached such an extent that the peoples in the Soviet Union and Czechoslovakia now look upon the Syrian people as legendary heroes fighting for the sake of freedom and world peace. We have returned from this visit confident that when we are attacked there will be our friends who will defend us for the sake of peace and in support of the sapples' right to freedom and national sovereignty.

WEST INSINCERELY CRITICIZES MOSCOW TALK

Beirut, ANA, in Arabic Code to the Near East, Aug. 12, 1957, 1636 GMT--M (Text)

Damascus—An official Syrian source today described the discussions conducted by the Syrian delegation headed by Khalid al-Azm, the Syrian Minister of State and Deputy Defense Minister, in Moscow and Prague as constituting a natural part of a policy of positive neutrality and nonalignment emanating from the interests of Syria and the Arab countries which Syria is practicing with much determination and scrutiny in order to reslice economic prosperity and insure its integrity and sovereignty.

The source said that the objective of the uproar aroused by certain Western countries about the Syrian delegation's mission in the Soviet Union is to create a new excuse in order to exert pressure on Syria with the hope of making it amend or change the inclination of dts foreign policy. The source added that this uproar indicates premeditated bad will since in Afghanistan, India, Indonesia, Burma, and other Asian countries have preceded us in concluding agreements similar to the Syrian economic agreement without raising any uproar like the one which was aroused about Syria.

The source went on to say that public opinion will be acquainted with the details of the results reached by the Syrian delegation when the draft agreements concluded by it during its visit to Russis and Czechoslovakis are referred to the Chamber of Denuties for approvel in accordance with the constitutional procedures. The source added that the Soviet Union has responded to Syria's policy sining at obtaining financial and technical aid to realize its accordance development provided that this aid is devoid of any condition which would breach its independence and sovereignty.

The Soviet Union, he said has expressed its readiness to offer the required aid without my condition or obligation being attached. This has been an exception among promises for aid given us in conjunction with conditions conflicting with our sovereignty and our segerness to exercise this sovereignty in an atmosphere of complete independence. The source has esserted once more Syria's segerness to carry on with the policy of nonalignment and treating all countries on an equal footing—the policy adopted by the Bandung Conference.

Press Comment

Cairo, Egyptian Home Service, Aug. 14, 1957, 1430 GMT--M

Properties (1900) (From the world press review) TOTAL COLUMN

Summary)

The Syrian newspaper BARADA has reviewed western relations with the Arubs on the occasion of the conclusion of the latest Syrian-Soviet agreement. Under the headline A New Era, the paper says: "For over 40 years the Arabs cooperated with the Western powers. During these years we joined the first world war on the side of Britain and France in order to deliver ourselves from the Turkish yoke, to attain recognition of our independence, and to achieve unity for the sake of which our martyrs.died. But our reward from these two powers was that they colonialized our countries, divided them into small states, looted our wealth, humiliated our good men, and let our evil men rule us. They also made Palestine, the most sacred part of our countries, a national home for the criminals of the world.

In the second world war we stood by the side of the allies and used all our resources and wealth to make our enemies victorious. Our reward fro them was the usurping of Palestine and the establishment of an intruder state. They provided this state with all means of life and strength to .. enable it to annihilate us, loot our homelands, and expand in these homelands at our expense. Our reward from them was to shatter our unity, colonize our countries, loot our wealth and oil, and set their armies and the armies of the gangater state upon us.

"They were not satisfied with this. They picked the bad people from among us, and made them rulers in some of our countries, so that they might sign on behalf of our peoples, pacts and agreements which would allow our countries to be occupied and our peoples become slaves. This is what we got for cooperating 40 years with the West, until God sent us President Jamal Abd an-Nasir and his colleagues, the commanders of the revolution in Egypt."

The Araba changed the tactics of this shameful and humiliating cooperation and adopted the policy of neutrality. They broke the seige and extended their hand to the honorable rulers in the world, cooperating and dealing with them to limit the oppression of imperialism which was trying to dominate the Arabs. "Thus they led the way for us, we in Syria. We also looked toward these honorable rulers and found in them honest friends, who ask nothing from us but to keep away from blocs and pacts which would make us their enemies. This is the least that a friend can ask of a friend.

"The agreement which was signed in Moscow shall be the opening of a rew era between the Soviet Union and all the Arabs. Because the strengthening and development of Syria economically and industrially will make it able to resist and destroy the plots and intrigues which imperialism engineered against it. Thus the hour when the Arabs will get rid of imperialism draws near. Imperialism will then be expelled from its last positions, which began to shake as a result of Arab consciousness, and Arab nationalism will then attain what it wants and the Arabs will occupy a high position among the nations."

AL-AZM REPORTS ON MOSCOW AGREEMENTS

Devectors, in Alabic to Syria and the Near East, Aug. 16, 1957, 0500 GMT- M

(Statement by Minister of State and Actir; Defense Minister Khalid al-Azm)

Dear compatriots. The Syrian Government delegated us to convey to the covert Union both government and people greetings from the Syrian government and both government government and government and government government government and government govern

We were met with hospitality and welcome in these lands, by those in office, by the paople, and particularly by workers whose factories we visited. In hospitality was not accorded us just because we were official representatives of the Syrian Government. It went beyond us to embrace all members of the Syrian delegation to the Moseow festival. Whenever we passed through the streets, we saw the enormous crowds which surrounded members of the Syrian delegation to the festival, expressing welcome, hospitality and atto ment. This made us realize that the name of Syria is very populationer and that the Syrians enjoy a large measure of love and respect.

As I said before our talks dealt with our economic affairs. Since Syria

As I said before, our talks dealt with our economic affairs. Since Syria achieved sovereignty in 1943 successive governments have studied with the advice of domestic and foreign experts the vital schemes required for us to belster our political indpendence. There were numerous studies, some of which were completed accomplished, and put into special files, and others which were not completed and not even (begun?). We have an opinion regarding the total requirements for these projects which would belster our economy and bring it to the level we delire.

Among he prominent projects is that for the railways and roads and air and sea transport. All of us know that the railways existing in Syria are a legacy from the concessions obtained by foreign companies. Some of these railways have a broader gauge than others. Links among the Arab states were nonexistent. The railway network here was small.

Therefore, we had to study railway affairs and to make the railways point the service we require by linking the agricultural land which produces conharvests with the seaport which we established in the town of Latakia.

The Ministry of Public Works rade the studies for these projects, and a world company submitted a detailed study in a number of volumes covering our needs in this field, such as the laying of a new railway line between Latakia and Al-Qamishli and then linking it with the Baghdad line. The cost of this long line was estimated at 550 million Syrian pounds. There is also the project for linking Damascus with Homs via An-Nabk by railway which would be joined to the general railway network.

Besides the railway, there are several projects for connecting a number of roads, thus making them suitable for truck transportation, particularly from Al-Jazirah to the sea. We are also in need of sea transportation to insure the delivery of goods to foreign ports or to import the goods which we require from abroad. Besides this there is air transportation of which we lave a small nucleus between Syria, Egypt, and the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia, and we want to expand it to cover Europe also. We also have another project for enlarging Latakia port. Before its expansion is accomplished, scheduled ofor autumn, its administrators realize that it is too small to cope with the number of cargo ships which carry the imports and exports. It is also contemplated to expand the port further and to lengthen the quays where the ships anchor.

The are also irrigation and well projects. You know that our country is originally agricultural and that it requires many irrigation projects to increase the area under cultivation and consequently increase our agricultural crops. The irrigation projects are summed up in building new dams on the large rivers in Syria, and at the same time we shall be able to generate electricity and use electric power in factories for lighting and other purposes.

The water stored behind these dams in the winter can be distributed in the summer. Thus we shall be able to double the area of our agricultural land. There projects cost enormous sums. One of the prominent projects is (word indistinct) (Al-Fasha) which according to expert estimates generates more than (90,000?) kilowatts, in other words, more than 150,000 horse-power.

There are also a number of projects to construct assembly plants for tractors, other agricultural machines, and for cars. We use many cars and agricultural machines. All these machines are imported from abroad against payment. They may break down and they remain unproductive. We are also contemplating the establishment of factories to make spare parts for these tractors and cars locally, so they will be serviceable and give good use in agriculture.

C 7 -

SYRIA Aug. 15, 1557

Profes there are other factories which we have yet not been able to establish. We are also contemplating their establishment unless individual capital (is able?) to undertake it.

For r governments and the present government conducted several stylics at the implementation of the projects. The World Bank was difficult. Talks had been conducted between the Syrian delegation and the World bank in 1984-55 to obtain the least required, but regrettably we were unable to accept the terms of the contracts because they would have imposed on us intolerable and (imprestical) terms, such as submitting to the bank the names of the compencial establishments and companies we want to contract, obtaining the bank's approval before concluding contracts with them, and informing it of the method of exploiting the land and its distribution among the because it because the approval of a special committee to be set up by the bank.

There arbiti my terms were incompatible with the principle of independence and freedom to which we adher: Consequently, the representatives delegated by the government to discuss these subjects were unable to recommod that the government accept these terms. Therefore these projects remained pending. Some of them were financed by the government from its own revenue such as Al-Ghab project, and others remained at the paper work and file stage because the government was unable to find the manny for their implementation.

As you know, unless political independence is coupled with economic independence, one cannot feel that this independence is secure. A strong national monomy is the real support of political independence. Therefore, we defined to approach the Soviet Union with these projects and discussed then in Mosmow. Naturally, our discussion was not detailed because there were just two of us, my colleague the Minister of Public Works and myself, and we had no technicians with us. We only wished to reach a preliminary agreement with the government of the Soviet Union. If we reached an agreement on these subjects in principle, talks between the experts of both rides could begin to conclude these agreements in detail.

We were able to reach agreement as we mentioned in the joint statement which was announced in Moscow when we were there and with which you became nonweighted here. Accordingly we agreed with the coverment of the Soviet, Inion to undertake these projects jointly, after the experts have submitted to both sides the details of the projects. The expense of these projects will be aid by the Syrian Government in long-term installments. This will have the nestrof the goods, machines, and spare parts we shall import from the Soviet Thion and the wages of the workers and technical experts unich we shall require from it. As for the wages of local workers, the calories of the local amployees, the cost of the raw materials which will be used in these projects, such as sand, gravel, stone, couldn't all so forth-they shall be supplied by the government.

Lightly, A.A., in Arabic Code to the Hear East, Aug. 17, 1057, (Text) Dampseus--Hsan al-Jibiri, chairman of the political committee of the Parliamentary National Front from which the present government purposed, said that Nhelid al-Azm, Acting Defense Minister, in his capacity as chairman of the Syrian delegation to the discursions which recently took place in Moscow and Prague, submitted to the committee at a meeting this afternoon the results of the Moscow discussions. He said that after hearing these results the committee decided to thank the government for the agreements which the Syrian delegation had concluded and in which the security of the state and its interests were unconditionally taken into consideration.

Af-Jabiri added that Al-Azm told the committee in his capacity as Acting Iscence Minister that the government has taken firm and reassuring measures for the people with regard to recent developments in Syria. Al-Jabiri added also that there is no need for the government to submit the agreements reached by the Syrian delegation during its visit to Moscow to the Chamber of Diputies for approval since they offer all necessary facilities to promote agriculture and the economy in Syria. He described these agreements as simply aid which the Syrian Government requires from the USSR to implement its projects.

In his capacity as chairman of the Parliamentary Foreign Affairs Committee, Al-Jabiri said that he today received from the Sylian Government an invitation addressed to the committee to visit the Soviet Union. The invitation left it for him to decide on the date if he accepts.

(Fditor's Note: Paris, AFP, Radioteletype in English to the Americas, Aug. 18, 1957, 2112 GMT reported that Al-Azm "announced today" that Al-Jabiri would "soon go to Moscow" and, according to Al-Azm, would "tell Soviet authorities about Syrian needs for experts of various types." The item added that "final details concerning this problem will be embodied in agreements to be concluded in Moscow or Damascus," according to Al-Azm.)

SYRIA Aug. 19, 1957

Following the meeting of the Parliamentary Foreign Affairs Committee, Abd al-Wathab Hawmad, a leading member of the People's (Ash-Shab) Party, which is in the opposition, and a member of the Parliamentary Foreign Affairs Committee, today answered a question from a journalist about the attitude of the opposition in regard to the discussions conducted by Khalid al-Azm in Moscow, saying:

"The information supplied by Khalid al-Azm and Salah ad-Din al-Bitar has made it clear to us that the matter is not one of conditional Soviet aid but rather one of Soviet financing of productive projects needed by Syria, on condition that Syria pays back such money within a fixed period and pays interest thereon at a rate of $2\frac{1}{2}$ percent. Thus it is purely a commercial matter, and there are no restrictions or conditions involved."

Howmad added that he asked Al-Azm and Al-Bitar as to whether there are any secret protocols or agreements accompanying these economic agreements, and that they categorically denied that there is anything which was not mentioned to the committee.

Following the meeting, Ihsan al-Jabiri, chairman of the Parliamentary Foreign Affairs Committee, stated that Al-Azm assured the committee that the financing of the Syrian projects will not take place by means of loans but on the basis of lending Syria the services of experts who will carry out technical work and be paid wages, and that Syria will pay back the cost of the necessary equipment by long-term installments with an interest of 2 percent.

(Editor's Note: The item concluded by noting that Al-Bitar spoke of the nature of the propaganda certain quarters are conducting about the recently revealed plot. Al-Jabiri also said the committee heard Al-Bitar's contention that the time is "now opportune and appropriate to implement" a federation between Egypt and Syria. AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE reported at 2120 GMT on Aug. 18 that Al-Jabiri said a special committee was formed to study this federation move.)

AL-AZM: SYRIA NOT ACCEPTING COMMUNISM

Beirut, ANA, in Arabic Code to the Near East, Aug. 6, 1957, 1015 GHT-H

(Text) Demascus--Syrian Minister of State Khalid al-Azm told reporters today that the first thing he said to responsible Soviet officials in Moscov was: "We, the Syrians, do not accept your communist creed, and we are not establishing our relations with you on the basis of communism. We are cooperating with you only on an honest international basis without having anything to do with ideologies and beliefs."

Al-Azm added that Soviet Premier Marshal Bulgamin answered him saying that Russia does not impose communism on anybody and definitely does not interfere in Syria's internal affairs, and that its desire is to see Syria free and independent, free from the traces of imperialism and the selomement of imperialists.

Beirut, ANA, in Arabic Code to the Near East, Aug. 18, 1957, 0945 GMT--M

(Text) Damascus--At a meeting held last night under the chairmanship of Premier Sabri al-Asali, the Syrian cabinet approved the agreements concluded by Khalid al-Azm, Minister of State and Acting Defense Minister, during his recent visit to Moscow and Prague. The cabinet decided to place the development board in Syria under the supervision of Khalid al-Azm and that the powers of the development board would include control of the construction projects on which implementation agreement was reached in the aforementioned agreements.

The cabinet also decided to add the following new members to the development board: Wajih as-Samman, director of the electricity establishment in Lamascus; Abd al-Basit al-Khatib, director of Al-Ghab project; and Kamal Ghali, a prominent official of the .Syrian customs directorate.

(Mitor's Note: Two lines on background of development board omitted.)

The cabinet has asked the Ministry of National Economy to enter into talks with Russia and Czechoslovakia to bolster and expand trade between them and Syria.

(Text) Damascus--Syrian Foreign Minister al-Bitar has stated that Syria did not sign any agreement with the Soviet Union. "All that has happened was that a joint communique was issued laying the principles which could be used as a basis for the growth of our economy and the development of our various conditions," he added. Al-Bitar made this statement during an interview he had yesterday with the correspondent of the American Universal Television Company which was released last night by the Syrian directorate general of prepaganda and information.

Replying to a question about the causes that have led to the strengthening of relations between Syria and the Soviet Union, a development that has not taken place between Syria and many other countries, the Syrian Foreign Minister said: "There were no extraordinary factors that made our relations with the Soviet Union good and cordial. It is merely that the Soviet Union has fully understood the aims of the Arabs in their present historical era and has realized the legitimacy of these aims, and has thus based its relations with us on this realization. The Soviet Union has supported the Arab states in the international field on this basis."

Asked if Syria had rejected aid or a loan from the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development about a year ago, he said: "Syria rejected the aid of the International Bank because the conditions which the bank laid down prevented the free and independent development of our country economically." Al-Bitar added: "Political conditions were attached to these loans. Of these, one condition stipulated that we should cooperate with the United Nations Works and Relief Agency on the chabilitation of the refugees. This means that Syria would have had to include have packed in the United States for the Middle East which seeks to make Israel's domination of the Arab homeland a legitimate matter and to impose peace upon us."

Commercial and the United States was providing Israel with one and a half billion dollars worth of hill onl grants last year while it supplied the Arabs only a trifle."

Al-Bitar replied in the negative to a question about whether Syria's rejection of the Eisenhouer plan was tuntament to rejection of all American aid. He said that Syria wanted to express its point of view to Biologis, the envoy of President Disenhouer, and would have allowed his visit, but it made the authorities concerned understand at the form time that Syria could not about not be pure Arab nationalist and the first that Syria could not about not of the Syria. The first to visit the ficher's refused to visit Syria. The first to visit the ficher's refused to visit Syria. The first that the said satisfies the first pure from proof, but that it was definited to the first of the Syria. One of the myster achieves the Syria."

Askel his opinion about the extent of the success of the United Nations, Al-Bitar said: "Every time the policy of the United States and the Vest unrees with the policy of the Seviet Union there is a success for the United Nations. I believe that the success of this organization stands on this basis."

Strong Syrian-Yemeni Units Could Establish Russians as Mediterranean Force

By OSGOOD CARUTHERS

Special to The New York Tie CAIRO, Aug. 10-The Boviet drive to build up the armies of Egypt, Syria and Yemen was viewed by diplomats in the Middle East today as a concerted effort to establish a powerful friendly force at the back door of the West's northern tier defenses.

The Soviet Union is reported to be supplying some of the latest model MIG-19 jet fighter planes to Egypt and Syria and is sending two submarines to the Syrians as a Mediterranean supplement to the three already delivered to Egypt.
Diplomats believe these deals are simed at putting the Soviet Union in a new position as a major Mediterranean power.

Since Egypt could use her submarines in the Red Sea also, if she desired, and since the Soviet Union has been sending arms to Yemen, Reis believed tant the Kremlini is seeking at the same time to gain a strong foothold in the Red Sea area.

Syrian Deals Held Fereboding

The Soviet Union's recently concluded deals with Syria are considered by diplomats to be the most ominous signs of this trend to appear thus far.

Whether the Soviet-equipped armies of Syria and Egypt would be maintained as strictly neutral or as pro-Soviet forces is considered academic. In either case they could most certainly be counted on to be against the vital interests of the West in the axes.

By providing arms and long-term credits to the Syrians and Egyptians the Soviet Union has succeeded in gaining important allies at the rear of the West's Bugheed Pact area without havw had to conclude military pacts or mutual defense treaties, distanteful to the followers of Egypt's President Gamal Abdel

Probably of even greater importance from a long-range point of view is the reported new project whereby the Soviet Union has agreed to finance a long-term loan and help build a railway in Syria between Latakia and El Palrah, an important agricultural center on the Euphrates River near the Turkish border.

The Soviet Union is also reported ready to help the Syrians construct a major highway linking Latakia, a seaport, with Aleppo and the interio along the Turkish frontier.

BY OSGOOD CARUTHERS DAMASCUS, Syria, Aug. 23 No final agreement on the ed expansion of Boylet aid to Syria and Boviet-Syrian trade has yet been reached Syrian officials said today.

Buch an agreement is to be worked out in long, detailed negotiations, the Syrians said, but an date has been set for them to begin.

These assertions, added to denials by principal Syrian officials that they were driving their country into the Soviet camp, suggested that extremely nationalistic leaders were taking a sober view of their situa-

No Policy Shift Discerned

There was no indication that they were retreating from their boldly outlined policy of a "greater understanding" with the Soviet bloc and a firmer opposition to Western policies in Middle East.

However, it would appear that Syrian leaders had got over the first flush of excitement at the Kremlin's sweeping offers of loans and technical experts to push through major development projects.

These offers were obtained earlier this month by Khaled el-Azm, Syria's Minister of Detense, during visits to the Soviet Union and Czechoslovakia.

When the ambitious 60-yearold official returned, he proudly fold his countrymen he had obtained eutright piedges of help in building new roads, new railways, expanded port facilities and other projects. In addition, he said, the Soviet Union is ready to expand greatly its purchases of Syrian products.

This seems to account for a tendency in Damascus now to There are no signs that any of the men in power are in a m to improve the foundering relations with the United States, but they do apparently want the world to believe that Byris has not become a Soviet satellite.

All the present Byrian lenders contend that it is the United policy of "supporting imperialism and Zionism in the Middle East" that has turned them against the West and driven them to seek the sup-port of the seviet Union.

Army Is Key Pactor

What is causing the West, deep concern is that Syria, at the back door of the Western defense system in the Middle East, is building up an army equipped by the Russians and therefore dependent upon the Soviet Union hands of officers and politicians of avowed anti-Western sentiments. Some of whom, indeed, are quite enhusiastic about the new friendship with the East, the threat to Western aims in the area is obvious.

However, except so far as for-sign pulsar is a for-sign pulsar is concerned these eign policy is concerned, things have not yet developed to a point where Syria is irrevocably lost to the East. Arab nationalism still is the predominating force in the country. Most of its supporters hope they will be able to strengthen an "Arab nation" (which would include Syria's neighbora) without becoming tied to either the Soviet Union or the United States.

Struggle Is Continuing :-

It is clear that the struggle control in Syria has not for control in syria has not reached a conclusive stage. Shifts in the army command have put the nation's security forces more firmly in the hands of young officers whose ideas are patterned after those of President Gamal Abdol Nasser of Egypt. In the political field, pre-Westerners, Right-Wingers and genuine moderates have little er ne influence. However, in the coalition of politicians leading Syria along her present reuta are Socialists, Commu-nists, pan-Arabists and extreme nationalists. The turking and pulling among individuals and factions for control appears to he going on in the accepted Syrian fashion. A swing to the West is the least of all possibilities.

Reports reaching New York yesterday indicated that more than 100 Syrian Army efficers had been appeared following inst week-end's shake-up.

the changes was the demand of flow of martial law. Martial law was in effect in Syria during the Suce crisis last fall and was lifted only a short time r .o. General Bisri and Lieut Col. Abdul Ramid Servaj, Chies of Intalligence, demanded that Pres-ident al-Kuwatly reimpose it.

The President apparently did not sign the martial law order before leaving Damascus.

Russia Offers Syria Cheap Loan

Minister Says West's Rates Were Unfavourable

Expected Purge of Civil Service

From H. A. R. PHILBY

DAMASCUS, August 24

LONG-TERM loan carrying 2.5 per cent. interest is the essence of the recent Soviet proposals for financing the expansion of the Syrian development programme, according to a statement made to-day by the Syrian Minister of Public Works, Fakher al Hayyali.

The Soviet Government also expressed willingness to buy a considerable part of Syria's exportable surpluses of wheat and barley, paying as to half in hard currencies and half by the supply of machinery and technical equipment.

The Minister stated that before going to Prague and Moscow, Syria had approached several West European Governments and the International Bank for the necessary finance, but that the terms offered were unfavourable.

Some European Governments, according to the Minister, offered short-term loans at 7 per cent., while the International Bank asked 5 per cent, interest and also claimed the right to choose which firms should participate in development projects.

The Minister added that Soviet technicians would ente Soviet teenmeians would enter Syria to implement scheme-which, he claimed, should do much finally to disperse the economic crisis that overhung Syria last winter.

Tranquil Air in Damascus

The return of President Kuwatly from Egypt, announced for to-morrow, is likely to calm the excitement seoused outside Syria by the recent changes among the senior officers of the Syrian Army. It is officially stated in Army. It is officially stated in Damascus that the President personally signed the decrees which removed General Nizamuddin from the post of Chief of Staff in favour of General Afif Bisti, and the President has confirmed the truth of the statement from Egypt. Evidently, if he felt any unease about the changes he does not consider them worth a political crisis involving the Presidency. Damascus to-day has every appearance of tranquillity, and even right-wing Syrians are bewildered by the near-hysteria of earlier reports of the situation put out from neighbourng. Arab capi-

Not a Communist Group

At the same time they could hardly he repudiated, especially as some of them promise the fulfilment of ambitious development projects planned long ago, but held up for lack of finance. Such a one is the Yussuf Pasha Dam on the Euphrates, which is expected to open no 300,000 hectares of cultivable land besides anceting some of the industrial needs of Aleppo.

of Aleppo.

The immediate significance of the recent changes in Syria is that the group of Army officers led by General Allf Bizri, Colonel Naturi and Allf Bizri, Colonel Sarraj have now achieved complete control of all armed forces. In the Army, all officers opposing them have been removed from their communds. Moreover, they have extended their control to the gendarmerie and police by appoining Brigadier Ismal Faisal to be acting commander of the former and It. Col. Abdullah Jasuma acting director of the latter—for both men belong to the same group.

The group whose long struggle for power has thus been crowned with success does not consist of Communists, according to the best informed Western sources here. Their closest civilian allies are the Baath Socialists—a much stronger parts—who are now expected to carry out a purge of the Civil Service to match the Army purge just completed.

Crop Sales to the West

But while the new men in power are not Communist, they do regard Soviet aid as essential to the well being of the Syrian Army, which they identify not unnaturally with the well being of Syria. The view that Syria has no triends in the West and that she has no choice but an Eastern orientation is certainly widespread here.

How far the final agreements will bring Syria into a position of long-term economic dependence, on the Saviet bloc is as yet difficult to assess Certainly reports that Syria was forced into the new alignment by near-bankruptey are not bone out by the facts of her forcian trade position. the facts of her foreign trade position.

Half the barley crop has already been sold to Western customers—Western Germany, Denmark, Belgium and Italy. Almost the whole of last year's cotton crop has been sold—one third to the Soviet bloc and the rest elsewhere. Wool exports, chiefly to the United States, have also been well maintained.

The chief remaining problem is Spria's wheat surplus, now amounting to nearly 400,000 tons. The alternatives trader consideration at a tripagnlar decl with Italy and I sypt, by which Syria would sell hard wheat to Italy, Italy a corresponding amount of soft wheat to Egypt, and Egypt would repay Syria by hitherto unspecified means—or a big deal with Russia under which the latter would take to bulk of the Syrian surplus.

The overall picture would seem to be their the Soviet bloc share in Syria's trade is certainly growing, but that the share of Syria's exports taken by Western countries remains far too substantial to make unilateral dependence on the Soviets either necessary or desirable for her.—Copyright.
